In August-September 2019, the Center for Profitable Agriculture reviewed a list of livestock harvesting and processing plants in Tennessee that were permitted for inspection by the U.S. Department of Agriculture’s Food Safety and Inspection Service (USDA FSIS). Most of the plants on the list operate for the sole purpose of handling animals, meat and processing for their own company, such as Tyson, Koch Foods, Pilgrim’s Pride, Hillshire Farm, Swaggerty Sausage and Wampler’s Farm Sausage. However, 15 of the plants were considered “possibilities” for farmers who want to have their livestock slaughtered and processed under USDA inspection in order to market their meat products. The plants considered possibilities for farmers to use for processing livestock for retail meat sales with the species being processed as of September 2019 are listed below by region of the state and identified with a corresponding number on the map.
